THE UNRETURNING BRAVE.

These crowned with an eternal fame
That country which they loved so well,
And lit with an undying flame
Their path when death's dark shadow fell.
But though they died, they are not dead:
Their valour took them by the hand,
And, strong in all its glory, led
Their spirits back from Shadow-land.

NATIONAL ECONOMY— A POSSIBILITY.

To anyone who takes the trouble to read this article it may quite possibly seem to be but the vaporings of an idle mind. The ideas contained are advanced not as something likely to occur, but in order to show what would be possible. As a nation and as an Empire we are not yet terribly in earnest. Perhaps we do not need to be. Happy, indeed, if such were the case. Recent reports lead one to believe that Great Britain is beginning to concentrate her energies in a more marked degree than ever before. The following few suggestions are intended to show the straights to which we, or any nation, might be driven by necessity, and yet exist and not weaken. What is perhaps equally important, they illustrate what is possible for our enemy to do, if the German people are all of one mind and intent.

Let us assume the existence of what we have just stated does not exist—a terrible and earnest purpose in the heart and mind of every citizen of the Empire in general, and of Canada in particular, to consider no sacrifice too great in order to win this war. Now the essential physical factors in winning the war are two; the raising and maintaining of a sufficiently large army, and the obtaining, in the most efficient manner possible, the necessities of living for citizens at home and soldiers on the fighting line. Consider these in reverse order.

It is well for us to remember that these necessities of life include more than food and clothing. There are certain needs of mind and spirit which must be attended to in order to maintain a high standard of living. We do not forget this fact in what follows.

Our first item in the problems of efficiency is elimination of the unessentials. There are many citizens and much capital employed today in producing what is not essential to national welfare, and in some cases is even injurious.

What would perhaps appear most striking to a foreigner in this country is the existence to an unchecked, even exaggerated, extent of places of amusement and throngs of patrons. Now some relaxation of mind and body is essential, but the writer ques-

ONE OF OUR BOYS.

It will be interesting to all Dalhousians to know that "Toby" Jones, "the most talked of man in the British army" is not going to lose his leg, after all. He was wounded at Courcelette, in the famous advance when the Canadians finding less resistance than they expected "carried on" and took the village. As they came in on one side, the Germans retreated at the other.

It was a machine-gun that laid "Toby" low, several bullets "chewing up," as he put it, the bone of the right thigh. No better liked soldier was to be found in the Canadian Army Corps, and at once there was an attempt to bring him in. The first man who tried to do so was shot dead. "Toby" managed to get behind the body and so shelter himself from the storm of bullets. Next a medical sergeant, Owlstrom, by name, from Quebec went out to get him. He bound the broken leg to a rifle, as a rude splint, and dragged the wounded man back to safety. The rescuer also escaped unscathed, and for his gallant conduct received the D. C. M.

At first, Sergeant Jones was kept at the base hospital, where he could receive only inadequate treatment, and where he suffered great pain. At last, he was transferred to England to a hospital in Newcastle, and was put in a plaster cast. He still continued to suffer much pain and portions of mortified bone were discharged from the wound. His father having gone across to see him, and recognizing the seriousness of his condition, called in Sir Rutherford Morrison, a very famous surgeon in the north of England. He operated at once, using a new treatment of his own invention, "Bip," a composition which is put into a wound which will not heal and is then sown up in it. This treatment proved successful. The pain ceased and the bone began to knit. The patient was transferred from Newcastle to the Daughters of the Empire hospital in London. It is situated near Hyde Park Corner, a bright and cheerful spot. Lieutenant Jones—for his commission has been restored—is now promoted to an iron splint, and is permitted to go about on crutches. He can even go out in a spinal chair, for the injured leg cannot be bent. His friends hope to see him back safe and well about midsummer.

Dalhousians ought to realize what he has done. Canadians invented the trench raid, the most daring and desperate work men at the front can undertake. As Sergeant Todd said, "You never go out with the same bombing party twice." "Toby" literally lived in No Man's Land, between the opposing lines, and soon acquired the reputation of being the most skillful, daring and successful scout in all that devil-hand. He was known and trusted and looked up to by all. He was regarded as an authority on all points of that blood-fold desperate game. "Jones wouldn't

WHY NOT A GIRLS' RESIDENCE?

It was two weeks before the Christmas exams and I was blue. Reviewing is not pleasant at the best of times as it always serves as a very good indicator of wasted opportunities. But, if you have really tried to master a subject thoroughly, and find that you know very little about it, then you are indeed in a position to understand the depth of woe into which a human being can be plunged. In this state of mind was I when my landlady and I agreed to disagree, and I set out in search of a roof to cover me.

If it was half-raining, half-snowing and the mud was soft and sticky. However, I bravely donned my raincoat and rubbers, and holding a much worn umbrella above my only hat, I set forth.

My first stop was at a large, new house within seven minutes walk of Studley. Three times I rang and got no reply. I was just going away in despair when the door was half-opened and a very untidy maid said in sullen tones "Wha d yu wan?" I backed down the steps, muttering something about having made a great mistake, and beat a hasty retreat.

After fifteen minutes of anxious searching for a suitable looking house, I rang the bell of an upstairs flat. To my delight the door was opened by a very bright, cheery, little woman, who cordially invited me in. I began to tell her my story but to my dismay she interrupted me before I was half-finished. She opened the door and said in timid accents—"Please go at once as I don't think Tom (I presume Tom was her lesser half) would like me to talk to a girl who has been so unpleasant that she has to seek a new lodging." I managed to restrain my unseemly mirth until outside her door, but I resolved to try no more upstairs flats.

Arguing on the theory that there could hardly be another disappointment for me in the same house I resolved to interview the lady in the flat below. Her maid (I wonder how a woman in a small flat finds room for a maid) told me to wait a few minutes as Mrs. X—was never "in" to callers before four o'clock. It was then almost four so I thought I would wait. The room was small and literally filled up with heavy furniture. Imagine the sitting room of a flat having in it at one time, a five piece parlor suite, a large centre table, a piano, a music cabinet, two book cases, filled with gaily bound volumes, and a couple of easy chairs. After a careful survey of that room I decided that discretion was the better part of valor, and when the lady of the house appeared I tried to get her to give me an order for a patent wash boiler. She was quite irate and politely (?) requested me to depart.

My courage was still unshaken however, so I tried one more house. This time a large, rather fine-looking woman came to January twenty-fifth in the year of our Lord nineteen hundred and seventeen marked the forty-eighth anniversary of "The Dalhousie Gazette." Back of this old college paper—the oldest in North America—lies an interesting, and in many respects a unique record. For forty-eight years it has continued without interruption as the organ of the student body at Dalhousie. In its assembled volumes is contained a vivid account of the course of events at Dalhousie through nearly half a century. A more interesting hour can hardly be provided than to spend it in looking over the file of the Gazette. Articles of real permanent value, and others of merely passing interest; some of excellent literary style and others almost equally interesting for their distinctly amateur touch; keen controversies with other colleges—controversies of forty years ago over college ideals, that verged on the point of bitterness; mile-stones that mark the onward march of our college, interestingly recorded; names, appended to articles or mentioned in reports, which have since become shining marks in every sphere of the world's activities; all of which recital but suggests a portion of the varied interest the perusal of the Gazette file arouses. It mirrors student life and preserves a complete historical record of the past forty-eight years.

We have already mentioned in a parenthesis that the Gazette is the oldest student paper in North America. Possibly such a claim is unwarranted, but so far as we can learn we believe that claim is just. We shall not surrender that laurel till it is wrested from us.

Of the Gazette's priority in the history of Canadian student publications we are in no doubt. In The Dalhousie Gazette of January 25th, 1869, we have the first paper of its kind published in Canada. For four years after that date it held the field alone. To the Queen's Journal belongs the honor of second place. Its initial issue dates from November 1872. Perhaps it is not out of place to mention that a Dalhousian taking Theology at Queen's was instrumental in the founding of the Journal. The next two years saw the beginning of the now pretentious McGill Daily, the Athenaeum and the Argosy. From that to the present day one after another of the student papers made their appearance. We now extend our greetings to the latest, and not by any means the least interesting and attractive of the family, Anonymous, the exponent of student life at The University of British Columbia.

It has been perplexing to some to read "Volume 49" on the heading of the Gazette and to learn that its first number appeared in 1869. At first glance it seems as though we had gone too fast in our numbering. Apparently we should only be in Volume 48. This is explained by the fact that the first volume began in January '69, and closed with the end of that term. Volume 2 dates from the fall of the same year. It might be advisable, now that the fiftieth anniversary is approaching, to adjust this by allowing the present volume to be numbered up to January of next year. This will avoid carrying over the observance of the fiftieth anniversary into the middle of Volume 51.

Two of our contemporaries have developed into more of the newspaper style. The McGill Daily, as its name implies, has a daily issue, while the Queen's Journal makes a semi-weekly appearance. Some have held that assuming the form of a newspaper and appearing so frequently defeats the real aim and object of a student paper. We do not agree with such a point of view however, and believe that the next big step for the Gazette to take is to launch out on a semi-weekly enterprise. It will then be a "real live" student paper. We are of the opinion that this can be done and with some improvement over our contemporaries that have adopted the newspaper plan.

The present issue of the Gazette is largely given up to a directory of Dalhousians overseas. The value of this list will be at once apparent not only as a permanent record but as immediately useful to many. We have said before that this list is not complete and once more make the appeal to Dalhousians everywhere to take a little time to check over the list and advise us of any corrections or omissions. Our energetic bursar, Miss Harris, has given many hours of hard work to the compiling of this list and to her our best thanks is due. The least we can ask for is that all into whose hands the list now comes will co-operate in the effort to make it as complete as possible. Advice of corrections may be addressed either to the Editor of the Gazette or to Miss H. Joyce Harris, University office, Studley. Please consider this matter important.

Owing to the length of the list of addresses in this number much interesting material has been crowded out. Another issue is to follow immediately after this, however, and will be brought out by our new Editor-in-chief, to whom we wish every success and for whom we would solicit a renewed co-operation on the part of all students and graduates. No one but a past editor-in-chief knows how we fully sympathize with a new incumbent; and the unusual difficulties involved in continuing the paper this year are more than financial. Beside being the oldest college paper in North America we have the almost unique record of an unbroken course. The Gazette has never had to suspend publication and we want to preserve that record; so lend a helping hand and give the new editor your best support.

LIFE AT H. L. C.

The cold gray halls are lit by the glimmer of one tiny light. Outside all is dark.

Hark! a bell rings, followed by deathly silence. What means this unheeded signal, do you ask? It is only the rising bell, so-called because nothing rises but itself. After half an hour of peaceful quiet a few faint streaks of dawn appear and presently another bell is heard. As if by magic the rooms leap to life and scurrying forms rush wildly about, soap and towels in hand. In less than five minutes a miraculous change in appearance is effected and a quick slide to the dining room lands all (well, almost all) in their proper places, just as the stately "Mother Superior" enters. A pause—a hush—the scrape of seventy chairs, and then—"Oh, I just know that our side will have to read in Latin;" "Did you see—last night?"; "More bacon!"; "No, thank you no porridge for me," "Nine o'clock classes are dreadful"—another scraping of chairs and a hurried exit of the latter unfortunates, while the lucky "ten o'clock" or no-morning classes leisurely converse, embracing the radiators with fervor the while.

The next event is the mail. Oh that mail! No British censorship was ever so rigid. At some irregular hour of the morning by keeping a sharp lookout one may see a post-man creep cautiously to a little used door—unknown to the unhallowed feet of Dalhousians—and a packet of mail is apparently slipped inside, although never has anyone been seen to take it. In some inner recess it reposes for a time—varying in length with the mood of the powers that be—then it is slipped out, under guard, to the office and locked in a safe for an hour or more. By the time all have ceased to look for it and have decided that there was none the "powers" chuckle gleefully and unlocking the safe carry the few wilted letters to a retired nook and reluctantly leave them exposed to view where they are accidentally discovered before nightfall.

During this time bells have rung at short intervals but have no attention paid them by the lordly First Corridoreans and Sunny Nookers for whom bells (except those for breakfast, lunch and dinner) have no meaning.

Around six o'clock a weary throng troop in from afternoon classes, but a wash up revives their downcast air and a spirit of jollity pervades the dinner tables as "What are you going to do to-night?" is asked and answered in various ways from "Academy rush" to the rare reply of "Stay in and study." Loud groans are likely to meet such a statement and the rash assessor usually ends by spending the evening "anywhere back of the third row."

All around Ladies College even in the most unexpected places, one may see printed slips of paper hung. The new-comer, on attempting investigation is dragged away and told "These are rules, but if you don't read them you won't know when you are breaking them." When read at a later stage the humorous nature of these rules is apparent although to one who believed all she read they might be rather alarming. One of the funniest says "No food stuffs except fresh fruit are to be kept in the rooms." The humor is self-evident and all do their best to create exceptions to prove the rules and long after the "no visiting" bell has rung its knell kimonad figures slip to and fro bearing cardboard trays of bread and pickles on ordinary occasions, or if a "box from home" has lately come of

THE CANADIANS AT COURCELETTE.

September 15th, 1916.

Courcelette, red Courcelette!
Canadian sons shall ne'er forget,
Canadian fame shall never set
Upon the field of Courcelette.

From Pozieres to Courcelette,
It seemed a road through hell to get
But through it all they got there yet,
To Courcelette, red Courcelette.

Machine gun, shrapnel, hand grenade.
God! what infernal din they made;
Yet on, still on, their hearts were laid,
On Courcelette, red Courcelette.

Right through the German lines they smash,
Their bayonets flash, their Mills bombs
crash,
By mine, cross trench, they onward dash,
Determined to win Courcelette.

Canadians there their foes defied,
For Motherland they dared and died.
Canadians' sons shall tell with pride
Of how their sires took Courcelette.

Then wreath the laurel, twine the bay,
For these who fought and died that day,
For these who won that bloody fray,
Upon the field of Courcelette.

Oh! tell it by the camp fire glow;
Tell it when lies the winter snow;
Tell it when western breezes blow;
How Canada stormed Courcelette.

all imaginable dainties. Sometimes some lucky one has a birthday, and then—oh ye Gods! No pen could describe what delicacies are disclosed.

Near midnight, when the last weary soul has crept under blankets, coats, rugs etc., in their narrow cots, and tired brains have been lulled into dreams of lands where they don't have to cram, a bell rings again. "It can't be morning" you say, when you are brought to a realization of affairs by remarks uncomplimentary to the sense of certain people "who drag people up for a silly, idiotic, senseless"—etc., etc. At this point you really come to and say "Fire drill!" at the same time heartily endorsing your room-mate's remarks and adding a few she hadn't thought of. There is no help for it, so up we all get and wrapping most unbecoming red blankets Sioux fashion around us, trot out to the hall where already long lines have formed and where the roll is called. If someone fails to answer they are apparently consigned to a fiery tomb for no one goes after them. Then "about turn" is given and back we go to our dismantled beds, expressing gratitude that fire drill comes but once—oh well, say a week.

So go the days, with much laughter and some—at certain seasons much—work, until the time when "he school for the day is dismissed" for the last time and all pass out, some to come back for other happy years, others to pass on.

National Economy.

tions the necessity of persons being amused to such an extent as is true of our Canadian people today. The possibilities of amusing oneself, and of friend amusing friend in spare time, are exceedingly vast, and require no such employment of labor and capital as is at present used. The possibilities of utilizing amusement buildings as munition factories, or hospitals, might also be worth investigation.

Another non-essential is extravagance in dress. More money and labor are spent in dressing for purposes of display than for physical comfort and health. Please notice we do not say it is desirable,—but the necessities of war include such possibilities as issuing of a simple uniform to every woman as well as every man. Better that, surely, fair reader, than to be in the situation of the women of Belgium and Serbia today!

A third class of unessentials is certain articles now used as food. Germany, and even Great Britain, have done something in the way of eliminating from the national tables various luxuries. Canada might do as much or more.

The fourth unessential is worse than an unessential: We mean the liquor traffic. This is no moral or legal argument. There can be no rebuttal by pleas or personal liberty, such as are sometimes advanced. Here is a non-essential which causes much misery, disease, and death, and incapacitates many citizens from efficient service. It also uses up in its manufacture the following amounts of valuable and needed food stuffs:—

Barley.....	164,250,000 lbs.
Corn.....	72,170,000 "
Rye.....	15,360,000 "
Oats.....	720,000 "
Wheat.....	2,470,000 "
Molasses.....	19,690,000 "

A great amount of capital is employed, and 7,000 persons work in its manufacture alone, to say nothing of its distribution. Our people are supposed to be in dead earnest about eliminating unessential employment. They will of course at once remove this unessential curse from the land.

It sometimes seems as though the tobacco habit has become essential in the lives of many citizens; yet would their wealth, health, happiness, and general well-being suffer greatly if it became absolutely necessary to make an extreme economic effort, and even remove tobacco manufacture and all labour connected with its use? The bare suggestion will raise an outcry, yet let us not be too proud to consider it as a possibility.

As to the essentials, we might practise national economy in production, distribution, and consumption.

In production it might be possible to find out in some way what is needed and manufacture to supply needs, rather than, as is sometimes done at present, create needs to use what has been manufactured. It would not be impossible to eliminate wastage and utilize by-products much more than at present. A recent press article says that henceforth Britain will use the whole wheat, instead of only a part for finer flours. This is but one example of what we mean.

In the matter of establishing new industries, it would probably be more efficient to move labour than to transport the raw materials. An example of this on an Imperial scale is contained in a suggestion which the writer believes will be necessary in any event if the Empire is to lead the world in commerce and industry. Instead of making Great Britain the workshop of the world, her skilled workers must be moved to the raw products as fast as old plants wear out. Then instead of transporting raw materials from various parts to the motherland manufacturing consumable goods there, and transporting these back to the colonies or to other parts, the manufacturing will be done in the country whence comes that raw material which is least easily transported. This would mean a saving in freight costs.

In distributing goods much could be done by eliminating cross freight expenses. As a small matter, take the boot and shoe business. At present, boots made in Nova Scotia and New Brunswick find their way to the Pacific coast, and those made in Ontario and places further west are sold in the East. Why not have the easterners use eastern made articles, and the western citizens use the product of his own province. Cross hauls would thus be saved.

There are vast possibilities of eliminating wastage by doing away with many middlemen, salesmen, etc. It is perhaps unwise to more than suggest this now, but the reasonable imagination can surely recognize that goods could go more directly from maker to user in a society where all were working for the common good.

It is sometimes claimed that Germany must cease fighting for lack of money. The writer desires some information on this point. Why does Germany need money? When she could buy from other countries, purchasing power was needed. But the more perfect the British blockade the less does Germany need money. She must produce in Germany what Germans need. So long as she can do that, some system of exchange among her own people is all that is needed. Britain is using up her wealth, accumulated through years of industrial activity, in purchasing from other countries, notably the United States. It might not be amiss for her to attempt voluntarily what Germany is doing under compulsion, and to produce more of the essential goods, more efficiently, at home.

In consuming goods much economy could be practised. Here again we sacrifice clearness for brevity of expression, and merely suggest that there are possibilities unlimited, both of using less, and of using more efficiently, in household, in municipal, in Provincial, and in Dominion activities.

The man problem is an important one. Conscription is not a complete solution, and presents many difficulties and injustices. Yet some form of national service, whereby each man and woman would find a place of greatest usefulness, yet such that none would unnecessarily feel he filled that place against his will, is both possible and desirable. Meanwhile, the completely voluntary system would be found to work wonders yet unthought of if certain abuses were removed. The writer will be content with mentioning two reasons he has heard advanced for not enlisting.

To express the first in plain and inelegant language, some men do not feel themselves called upon to offer their lives, while they have reason to believe that too often men who at the head of affairs, who even make fine recruiting speeches, are grafters. Do not misunderstand! The writer calls none a grafter. But he has heard that argument advanced as a reason for not en-

INTERESTING MEETING OF D. A. K. A.

Forrest Hall,
10.30 p. m., Jan. 20th, 1917.

The first meeting of the year was much better attended than that of the D. A. K. A. C. When the minutes of the last meeting were read there were many protests, especially from those with sensitive consciences. Several members wished to register a kick (literally) against "the fool who has been writing those D. A. K. A. minutes in the Gazette." Various suggestions were made as to the guilty party. Some thought "Grandpa" and the Skating Club President wrote them in collaboration, but those gentlemen declined the honor. Another theory was that the senior member of the clan M-cl-n at Pine Hill had a hand in it, but he also refused to act as kick receiver. The laundry agent from that home of saints and hockey players was not present. This was considered to be an evidential circumstance, until it was explained that he was very busy improving a painless money extractor. Just then he appeared in person, last as usual, and on being accused denied with a wicked oath all connection with the matter. The Y. M. C. A. President was next accused. He began to talk in philosophical terms, but was called to order, whereupon he protested his innocence in English. In desperation it was moved and seconded that it must be someone from Pine Hill. Much discussion ensued. Finally a Sophette remarked that it might be a lady, who was obtaining her information through someone from Pine Hill, and in this connection suggested the diminutive Freshie-Soph who sometimes visits Tobin Street. Someone else suggested that the Forrest Hall girls sometimes had friends from Pine Hill to visit them, and possibly they were guilty. The name of the Junior class president was also mentioned. Finally the first year medical student, who is able to take care of seven girls at once, suggested that the Gazette Editor should be asked. That gentleman explained that he was under oath to maintain the secret, and that he dared tell nothing, not so much because of his oath as because he must now maintain the reputation of a Theological Student. He stated, however, that if anyone had an item of especial interest which he wished inserted in the Minutes, it would be possible to reach the Unknown by presenting it to any Gazette Reporter, or to himself. This clear and lucid statement was much appreciated. An amendment was finally carried to the effect that no-one really knows, though many would like to; and that the probabilities are that there are several persons of both sexes who furnish information.

A report was then heard in regard to progress on the new thought-reading machine. This is based on a chemical principle discovered about examination time by a Halifax Freshette whose ability to write two simultaneous papers was amply demonstrated. It was tested on several members of the faculty and registered a blank in each case. For obvious reasons their names are withheld, but the committee thinks the machine was rather disrespectful. It was tried on several second year Medical students, but did not register strongly enough to be understood. When tried at Forrest Hall the most remarkable results were obtained in the case of one resident when it was heard to say something which sounded like "Gold"—only different. The machine was unfortunately left in the Library one day, and the presence of so many anxious students strained the mechanism. It was then taken to the office. The President was in his private office, and meanwhile the student who came back this year on purpose to run the University, and who is sometimes mistaken for the President, entered the room. In the proximity of two great minds the machine blew up. A new one is being made.

It was moved that a terrible accident happened the smallest Freshman, when he went to answer the Forrest Hall phone the other Sunday evening. Motion not seconded.

It was moved by the long silent Freshman from Pine Hill, seconded by A-d-e, who may be a relative of the aforesaid Freshman, that a committee be appointed to write a new Latin composition to replace the time-honored, but prehistoric, spasms of Bradley-Arnold. The motion was passed, the following being appointed:—The big man who has returned to class '17 after two years absence; the Juniolette who smiled in the "photo-album"; the Law student who discovered the Dative of Affection.

A very hearty vote of appreciation was unanimously passed for the excellent work of the President and Secretary of the Skating Club in arranging Rink nights; though someone expressed the hope that this vote would not make their hats fit uncomfortably.

An enquiry regarding harmony in Delta Gamma meetings was answered by the president of that society, whom J. O. McL-n, with characteristic familiarity, calls "Jane."

Committees were appointed to see if the following rumors were true:—

That Th-mps-n is to be awarded the V. C. for valor in scratching his forehead with a bayonet.

That a Drug Clerk refused to sell cigarettes to Freshie G-l-l-gh-r on legal grounds.

A motion was carried that everyone who wastes time reading the minutes of the D. A. K. A., or wondering who wrote them, is just as big a fool as the one who writes them.

It was resolved that a message of congratulation be sent the Delta Gamma on their successful box social.

The meeting was adjourned, but several gentlemen were observed to linger.

do it that way," was a final criticism of any doubtful scheme.

His experiences would fill a book, and one hopes that he will use his enforced leisure in putting on record something of what he has seen and known. His letters to his friends show that he has lost nothing of his command of words in learning the ways of the deadly "lemon" and "cricket-ball."

One single episode will serve to illustrate the Odyssey our Dalhousian has gone through. On one occasion, he had gone scouting with a single comrade along the German lines and was returning cautiously in the pitchy darkness to the Canadian trenches. As he came nearer, suddenly he heard the slight click made by withdrawing the pin from the deadly, lemon-shaped Fuils bomb. He knew that five seconds after withdrawing the pin, the bomb explodes, and he realized that he was going to be bombed by our own bombing-post. At once, he threw himself on the ground and pulled his mate down beside him. The bomb was thrown, fell alongside him, bounded over and killed his comrade! Novelists write of hairbreadth escapes. This was hardly the breadth of a hair.—A. M. M.

the door and I had a hope of having at last succeeded. I told her that I was a Dalhousie Student looking for a room. She said to me "No. I won't take you. I have a room but I will not "let" it to a girl. You would be too much bother. You might just tell the college boys about this room though, because I am very anxious to get some one to take it."

I left her but I did not tell others about that room. I hope it is not 'let' yet and I also hope it never will be.

Eventually I found a room but not by means of a house to house canvass.

SENIOR SCENES.

At last it came! Although long delayed we felt it was bound to come. It was not unexpected for it had been talked of in the previous year. In fact nothing was unexpected—not even the way in which the boys rose to the occasion. Such excitement prevailed through the class that the Pine Hill telephone died from over exertion, but, as I mentioned before, the night of the Senior theatre party came at last.

Partners had been assigned in the way approved by History, and the Academy Players, who could not have been more happy in their choice of a play for such an important occasion, were faced by a most appreciative audience.

Ripples of laughter re-echoed at the antics of the "Dummy," who "told a lie once," and his young charge, and voting it "the best ever" the whole party rapidly made their way to the Tally-Ho. There, in the private banquet hall a long table glittered in festive array, soon increased as the Seniors seated themselves—our chaperon and the "most representative man of Dalhousie" at the head; the '17 President soon to leave on military duties, and the fair "Vice" at the foot.

After the various forks and spoons had been successfully manipulated for sometime, and while there was still one spoon at each place unaccounted for, to say nothing of a stray bread and butter plate, the master of ceremonies rose and in a brief but pointed speech called on the class President for a few remarks, which were well delivered considering that the request was "so unexpected."

At this point the reason for that extra spoon was explained by the appearance of the ice-cream, and as it was being disposed of we were surprised to learn that our honored college President was in our midst. Soon, however, the mistake was noticed and the "other Stan" was called on for a speech which was followed by others from the President of class '18 and one of the medicine representatives.

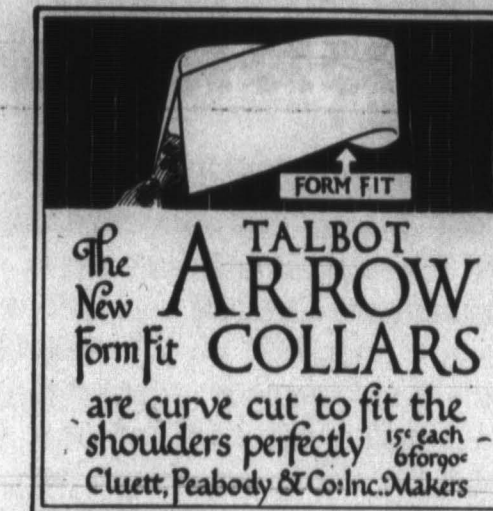

As the witching hour "when ghosts do walk" was almost come, "God Save the King" was sung with fervor and home we went through the quiet moonlit streets. The Senior theatre party was over.

Dulce est desipere in loco.

The Royal Military College of Canada

THERE are few national institutions of more value and interest to the country than the Royal Military College of Canada. Notwithstanding this; its object and the work it is accomplishing are not sufficiently understood by the general public.

The College is a Government Institution, designed primarily for the purpose of giving instruction in all branches of military science to cadets and officers of the Canadian Militia. In fact it corresponds to Woolwich and Sandhurst.

The Commandant and military instructors are all officers on the active list of the Imperial army, lent for the purpose, and there is in addition a complete staff of professors for the civil subjects which form such an important part of the College course. Medical attendance is also provided.

Whilst the College is organized on a strictly military basis the cadets receive a practical and scientific training in subjects essential to a sound modern education.

The course includes a thorough grounding in Mathematics, Civil Engineering, Surveying, Physics, Chemistry, French and English.

The strict discipline maintained at the College is one of the most valuable features of the course, and in addition, the constant practice of gymnastics, drills and outdoor exercises of all kinds, ensures health and excellent physical condition.

Commissions in all branches of the Imperial service and Canadian Permanent Force are offered annually. The diploma of graduation is considered by the authorities conducting the examination for Dominion Land Survey to be equivalent to a university degree, and by the Regulations of the Law Society of Ontario, it obtains the same exemptions as a B. A. degree.

The length of the course is three years, in three terms of 9½ months each.

The total cost of the course, including board, uniform, instructional material, and all extras, is about $800.

The annual competitive examination for admission to the College takes place in May of each year, at the headquarters of the several military divisional areas and districts.

For full particulars regarding this examination and for any other information, application should be made to the secretary of the Militia Council, Ottawa, Ont., or to the Commandant, Royal Military College, Kingston, Ont.

listing. Let the reader judge for himself, whether or not there is too much tainted loyalty in high places.

The second reason is one advanced by mothers for urging their sons not to enlist. In brief it is this: "We do not want to be unpatriotic, and if it must be, are ready to sacrifice our sons for our country's cause; but not while that country's government allows a liquor traffic to exist, especially in cities and towns where soldiers are mobilized." The mothers do not fear death for their sons as much as the temptations to immorality which could be removed. If the people and government would quit acting the fool and "put the lid on tight,"—or better still destroy the barrel,—there would be a marked increase in the number of voluntary enlistments.

It has already occurred to some that the holding of bazaars, entertainments, etc., is after all an inefficient way of supporting Patriotic, Red Cross, Belgian relief, and other funds. If every one was in earnest and ready to sacrifice much and give much, a great deal of organizing ability and labour could be turned into more productive channels.

If Canada were working at maximum efficiency, there might not be so much need of further enlistment. An American writer may have had a grain or more of truth in a recent article when he suggested that it would be more efficient for Canadians to supply the Allies with food and ammunition and other war necessities, and for Russia to supply "cannon fodder" from her millions of less skilled and less capable humani- It is a cold blooded proposition, but war is not altogether a matter of sentimental enthusiasm. It is at least true that Canada should not so decimate her population as to render herself unable to become more and more a granary and supply house of the Allies. When such point will be reached is a problem.

This article is not written by a pessimist. We are thankful that the steps suggested herein, and others, have not been necessary to accomplish what the Empire has already accomplished. It is not surely unwise, however, to consider possibilities which are not so remote as some think; nor to begin to practice individually and voluntarily some of those economies which it may otherwise become necessary to practise under government compulsion.—B.
