

The Proceedings and Transactions of the Nova Scotian Institute of Science
Volume 15 Part 2

Proceedings	xxi-xxvii
Port Hood Harbour: Its past, present and probable future -- D. S. McIntosh	71-82
The Blue Crab (Callinectes sapidus Rathbun): Extension of its range northward to near Halifax, Nova Scotia – H. Piers	83-90
Variation in the composition of compressed illuminating gas with pressure as it issues from the compression cylinder – H. J. M. Creighton	91-93
Accidental occurrence of the Pygmy Sperm Whale (Kogia breviceps) on the coast of Nova Scotia: An extension of its known range; with remarks on the probability of the former presence in these waters of the true Sperm Whale (Physeter macrocephalus) – H. Piers	95-114
A convenient form of burette for exact gas analysis – H. J. M. Creighton	115-117
Notes on the spring bird migration of 1914 at Antigonish, Nova Scotia – H. F. Lewis	119-128
The phenology of Nova Scotia, 1919 – A. H. MacKay	129-136