

CONTRIBUTORS

Douglas Barbour, a poet and critic, teaches English at the University of Alberta.

Wallace Brown is a historian at the University of New Brunswick and is also associated with the Programme for Loyalist Studies.

Theodore Colson teaches English at the University of New Brunswick.

Peter J. Edwards teaches French at Mount Allison University.

Lawrence Garber teaches English at the University of Western Ontario.

Ronald Huebert teaches English at Dalhousie

M.A. Klug teaches English at Dalhousie

J. Kushner, Economist, and R.D. MacDonald, English professor, are at Brock University.

Viktor Link, who teaches English at the Technical University of Braunschweig, Germany, has written on Joyce and on eighteenth-century English literature.

M.G. Parks teaches English and Canadian literature at Dalhousie.

J.M. Reibetanz, who teaches at St. Michael's College, University of Toronto, has been working on Eliot's poetry for some years.

Warren Stevenson teaches at the University of British Columbia.

Poetry from:

Pier Giorgio Di Cicco, Kingston, Ont.; Ralph Gustafson, North Hatley, Quebec; N.C. Hough, Montreal; Claude Liman, Thunder Bay, Ont.; Maureen L. Moll, London, Ont.; Gaston Pelletier, Delhi, N.Y.; Kenneth Rexroth, Santa Barbara, California; Graeme Wilson, Hong Kong.