

- Thomas R. Cleary teaches English at the University of Victoria in B.C.
- Randall Craig teaches English at the State University of N.Y. in Albany. His articles on British novelists and the theory of fiction have appeared in a variety of journals.
- Michael Dennis lives in Ottawa, is recently married and despite what he sees when he looks around, is still optimistic.
- Raymond Filip is presently researching a novel with the aid of a Canada Council grant (which turned out not to be a mythical beast after all), which will aid in travel to Lithuania.
- Arthur Kimball teaches at Kanto Gakuin University in Yokohama. He is active in the launching of a "Poetry Centre" at KGU.
- Margot Livesay grew up in Scotland and now lives in Toronto. "The Ring" will form part of a collection to be called "Peter and the Asteroids", which will be appearing in 1986 as part of a Penguin short fiction series.
- Dave Margoshes is a Vancouver journalist who has published stories and poetry in the Dalhousie Review, Canadian Forum, Queen's Quarterly, Prism, and others.
- Juliet McMaster is Professor of English at the University of Alberta, and a past president of ACUTE. She is the author of books on Thackeray, Trollope, and Austen. She is currently working on a book on the visual in Dickens.
- Kathleen McCormack teaches English at the Florida International University in Miami.
- Ron Miles is Director of the Arts and Humanities Division of Cariboo College, Kamloops, B.C. He has been widely published in North American journals, and his book, These People was published by Harbour Publishing.
- Margaret Moran is Associate Editor in the non-technical series of the Bertrand Russell Project and teaches English at McMaster University.
- Ken Rivard lives in Calgary. His latest collection of poems, published by Thistledown Press, is Kiss Me Down to Size.
- Michael Taylor teaches English at the University of New Brunswick.
- Eric Trethewey also teaches English at UNB.

Liliane Welch teaches French literature at Mt. Allison University in New Brunswick. Her most recent collection of poems is From the Songs of Artisans, published by Fiddlehead Poetry Books.

Gary Wihl is Mellon Scholar in the Department of English at The Johns Hopkins University.

Robert Wiljer teaches in the School of Architecture at the University of Waterloo, Ontario.

A.C. Wright teaches Russian at Queen's University, and has published short fiction in Journal of Canadian Fiction, Waves, Event, Nebula. He last appeared in the Dalhousie Review in 1980. He is the author of two novels.