INTRODUCTION

This document lists programs, services, and other resources in Atlantic Canada available to lone mothers through non-profit and community organizations. Lone mothers face multiple barriers to full social and economic inclusion. They often experience social stigmatization; isolation; and high rates of poverty, social assistance and unemployment. The advocacy, service, and support organizations and groups listed here may provide help for lone mothers coping with poverty, lone parenting, and difficulties accessing appropriate housing and adequate food.

This ‘program scan’ was produced primarily to serve as a reference document for the national research team working on the CIHR-funded project entitled “Rethinking Health Inequities: Social and Economic Inclusion and the Case of ‘Lone Mothers’”. The scan may also be useful for community organizations and individual women. It is organized by service type and by province and where applicable, some national organizations or programs are listed. When available, summaries of services offered, addresses, and the names of contact persons have been included.

Part of the Rethinking Health Inequities team’s research agenda is to identify gaps in research about lone mothers. With an improved understanding of both the barriers to inclusion that lone mothers face and the strategies they employ to cope with social and economic exclusion, the team aims to produce recommendations for policymakers to address gaps in services and improve the health of lone mothers.

I hope that this document will be helpful to the Rethinking Health Inequities research team in identifying what gaps exist in suitable programming to assist lone mothers. Please direct any comments or corrections to mpaynter@dal.ca.

The Group Against Poverty, formed in 1987, is comprised of individuals and groups who share the concerns of those living in poverty. The aim of this organization is to provide ways to surmount everyday challenges. At GAP, both low-income individuals and community group representatives meet regularly to discuss the crucial issues of poverty. From their discussion, this group initiates various efforts and activities within the community whether it be through educating the public, contributing to government policy or participating in a variety of community events. GAP strives to bring about change that will benefit those affected by poverty. GAP has a video available entitled, "Closing the Gap: the Fight Against Poverty." This video deals with the experience of people in St. John’s who are struggling to solve the problems of poverty, in the hope of creating a more just and equitable society.

Learning Independence Self-Esteem Training Education and Needs is an advocacy group, formed in 1987, which strives to address injustices created by a social assistance system that encourages abuse and inefficiency. This organization also attempts to find alternatives to chronic welfare and short-term employment and searches for opportunities that allow individuals to break free of the system. Therefore, the goals of this advocacy group are to change the system and empower low-income families and individuals. This organization, where low-income people provide services voluntarily, also conducts research on low-income families and assistance programs.

The R.E.A.D.Y Centre provides a program of preparation and access to employment for young people from aged 15 to 24 who are receiving welfare benefits. The program includes an educational component (secondary school equivalent and preparation for other types of training), and an employment component (job hunting techniques, career planning and life skills development). Placement in training or employment are also provided at the READY Centre. The Centre emphasizes a learner-centred approach based on the acquisition of personal and social skills that lead to self-empowerment.

The Anti-Poverty Network was organized in 1990. Its members originally come from tenant associations and parent resource centres in Halifax, Spryfield and Dartmouth. The majority of the members are or have been on some form of social assistance. Others belong to the group as support and resource persons. APN has tackled a variety of issues concerned with the social assistance system's failure to provide adequate assistance to families and individuals in need. This organization also provides workshops to empower people living on a low income.

Halifax Metro Welfare Rights Association was formed in 1969 to provide assistance to individuals and families on low incomes and fixed incomes. The Association originally focused on social concerns, but later turned its efforts toward other problems. Today, Halifax Metro Welfare Rights Association offers advocacy, information and referral services to a wide and varied clientele. Advocacy, information and referral are provided in problem areas such as social assistance, family benefits, unemployment insurance, workers compensation, housing, tenant concerns and other social concerns relating to low income.

The Low Income Network Committee has been in operation for the past four years. This organization is run by people living on low- incomes who provide support and advocacy to others. The organization also fights for the rights of low-income families regarding Pharmacare cards, Social Assistance and Workfare.

Aboriginal Directions is a non-incorporated organization consisting of Aboriginal people living in the area. The primary goal of this organization is to oversee the delivery of Employment Outreach Services directed toward the successful integration of Aboriginal People into the workforce. The goal of this project is to identify and serve Aboriginal people in need of employment-related services living in the target area. Centred in Saint John, the services will extend to Sussex in the east and Welford in the west.

Services offered by Aboriginal Directions include:
* Assessment of skills and needs in relation to employment, educational and training requirements, career changes, interview skills, résumé writing and effective job-search techniques.
* Career Paths, a comprehensive program focusing on career planning, goal setting and skills development.
* Information on government and community programs and services, as well as local job market requirements.
* Referrals through a network of community and government services on a follow-up basis to meet the identified support needs.
Grâce à des contrats de service avec les gouvernements provincial et fédéral, ce centre gère de nombreux programmes et offre plusieurs services sociaux dans la péninsule acadienne. Ce faisant, en plus de créer des emplois, il sert d'endroit de formation aux personnes désireuses de retourner sur le marché du travail.

Une des particularités de l'organisme est le lien entre les services des secteurs "privés" et bénévoles et les services sociaux gouvernementaux. L'utilisation du contrat de services, dans un contexte de privatisation, est l'option privilégiée. Comme dans beaucoup de centres communautaires, le développement du Centre de bénévolat est dû en grande partie au dynamisme du coordonnateur.

Through service contracts made with the provincial and federal governments, this Centre operates a number of programs and provides social services in the Acadian Peninsula. In so doing, in addition to creating jobs, the Centre serves as a training location for those wishing to return to the labour market.

One distinguishing feature of the organization is the link between the "private" and volunteer formula, and government services. The use of service contracts, in the context of privatization, is the preferred option. As with many community centres, the Centre's development is due to a great extent to the dynamic nature of the coordinator.

The mandate of the Chipman Community Care Inc. is to fight poverty and empower low-income families and individuals. To this end, this organization operates a Clothing, Furniture and Food Bank, and sponsors low-rental housing. Future projects include the building of a Family Enrichment Centre where low-income mothers can attend workshops on such topics as nutrition, financial management and government services. The children are then supervised in a play centre with stimulating recreation equipment operated by the mothers. The Chipman Community Care provides services such as support groups and cooking classes.
ELM HILL COMMUNITY CENTRE

R.R.#1, Elm Hill, New Brunswick
E0G 1V0

Elm Hill, a prosperous rural Black community at the time of the Loyalists, is now one of the poorest communities in New Brunswick. Its isolation, a source of strength in the 19th century, has become one of the reasons for its marginalization. Over the past few years, resident families in the area, supported by a group of community workers (nurse, social worker, member of the clergy, community organizer, and a representative from the New Brunswick Housing Services) have been working in close cooperation to help the community regain its cohesion and its pride. This has been accomplished through an unfailing respect for the decisions of the community, which is gradually taking charge through housing and community garden projects, and has renovated its community centre.

Solidarity among workers and the community, mutual trust, and especially the key role played by a community worker have succeeded in creating a dynamic process in this isolated community. From this project has sprung a model of cooperation between workers and the community, based on the resourcefulness of people, rather than on their problems.

LAKEWOOD HEADSTART ASSOCIATION INC

Lakewood Headstart is a non-profit community support centre geared toward low-income families, serving the suburban and rural areas of East Saint John, Saint Martins and Hammond River. Services provided include a clothing bank and an emergency food service. Every year, Lakewood Headstart organizes a "Christmas Sponsor Project" where gifts of new clothing, food and toys from nearly 100 sponsors help to make Christmas a joyful time for a corresponding number of families living in poverty. Lakewood Headstart also provides referrals to other services.

Created in 1974, Moncton Headstart Inc. was originally set up to provide children "at risk" with the personal and intellectual tools they require to adapt more effectively to the school system. Subsequently, preventive work with parents was added. Currently, the organization provides six services including a clothing counter, a bursary fund, an educational kitchen and a food counter.
Located in Moncton, N.B., this service provides underprivileged families in the region with a place to meet and to learn certain basic skills that will help them re-enter the mainstream of society.

The Saint John Learning Exchange provides training and retraining activities within an informal setting and in small groups. It emphasizes learner-centred training strategies through personalized assistance, and provides encouragement and support to all those who join the organization. According to the organization, it operates on three basic principles:
* to give priority to the aspirations and needs of the students;
* to maintain close contact with the community;
* to maintain financial stability through an employment policy that attracts qualified personnel interested in the organization's philosophy based on the needs of the participants.

In 1997, the business community of Saint John founded BCAPI. Like all savvy business people, BCAPI researched its market, learned from the people struggling in poverty, amassed demographic data and catalogued the breadth and depth of existing social and professional services available.

They developed a strategy based on the Anti-poverty Study that recognized the majority of the 19,000 impoverished residents of Saint John are single unemployed parents with no high school education.

As a result, senior business leaders in partnership with community organizations are pooling their time, influence, energy and professional resources. They assist in managing specific initiatives, motivate others, effect change in public policy and invest new ways to root out the root causes of poverty. And it's working!

The BCAPI model exemplifies innovation, "change that creates a new dimension of performance". It serves as a model of how a program with limited resources can tap the energy and abilities of a whole community producing impressive results and transform lives.

This is one of two provincial projects initiated by New Brunswick Housing Services to involve families living in subsidized housing in decisions that affect them. Gradually, over the last three years, the Centre has started to defend the rights of poor families living in the neighbourhood.

Managed by a Board composed entirely of low-income women living in the neighbourhood, the Upper Dawson Community Centre initiates activities that respond to the needs of the people living there, while at the same time participating actively in the provincial and national arenas.

In addition to providing information on the services available in the region, a distinguishing feature of the Centre is that it offers assertiveness training to its participants. A collective kitchen and a literacy group have just been added to the existing services.

FAMILY CENTRES AND PARENTING RESOURCES

HEALTH CANADA- NOBODY’S PERFECT

Nobody's Perfect is a parent support and education program for parents of children under age 6. The program gives parents access to accurate information in a supportive group setting. It is designed to meet the needs of parents who are young, single, socially or geographically isolated or who have low income or limited formal education.

Nobody's Perfect strives to: bring together a group of parents who can support each other; increase their knowledge and understanding of children's health, behaviour and safety; increase their skills in coping with the challenge of parenting, along with their ability to parent and their sense of confidence; and decrease their sense of isolation in parenting.

Nobody's Perfect was developed by Health Canada in partnership with the departments of health of the four Atlantic provinces. It was introduced nationally in 1987. The program is offered in communities as a series of six to eight weekly group sessions, and is built around five colourful, easy-to-read books, which are given to parents free of charge. Parents' participation is voluntary and free. During the meetings, trained facilitators work together with parents to discover positive ways of parenting.

The Canadian Association of Family Resource Programs and the Canadian Institute of Child Health coordinate Nobody's Perfect nationally. All provinces and territories have a Nobody's Perfect coordinator in place. Last year, Nobody's Perfect reached 12,000 parents in a variety of settings, such as child care centres, schools and Native friendship centres. Across Canada, nearly 7,000 community workers, parents and public health nurses have been trained as Nobody's Perfect facilitators.

COMMUNITY ACTION PROGRAM FOR CHILDREN

Health Canada's Community Action Program for Children (CAPC) springs from the awareness that communities are well positioned to recognize the needs of their children, and have the capacity to draw together the resources to address those needs. CAPC builds on community strength by funding community-based coalitions to establish and deliver services to meet the developmental needs of children under age 6 living in conditions of risk.

CAPC was designed to address the health and development needs of children living in conditions of risk. These children are: living in low-income families; living in teenage-parent families; at risk of, or have, developmental delays, social, emotional or behavioural problems; and/or neglected or abused.

Special consideration is given to Métis, Inuit and off-reserve First Nations children, the children of recent immigrants or refugees, children in lone-parent families and children who live in remote or isolated communities. There are 464 CAPC projects across Canada. Each CAPC project is unique. Some provide parenting workshops, one-on-one counselling or help families access other community resources. Others provide home visits or operate toy-lending libraries, family resource centres and community kitchens. Others provide street-level programs for substance-abusing mothers.

This project grew from the finding that poverty is perpetuated mainly because the education system (secondary school and university in particular) does not respond to the needs of low-income single mothers. Since they do not have access to an education that would enable them to break out of the poverty cycle, they are condemned to survive on welfare benefits.

With the help of a two-year grant from Human Resources Development Canada, this action-research project is attempting to identify the structural obstacles to post-secondary education in particular, and to propose appropriate corrective measures. Three hundred students from Newfoundland and Labrador participated in a joint project between Memorial University and a group of women in single-parent families. A final report is now available.

Prince Edward Island

FAMILY RESOURCE CENTRES

In Prince Edward Island, Family Resource Centres, operating with funding from the Community Action Program for Children, are grass-roots organizations, geared toward low-income families, designed to promote the whole healthy development of children aged 0-6 years by strengthening and supporting these children and their families. This is achieved, in part, by offering a variety of parent-driven programs and services, including a prenatal program; drop-in play programs; parenting programs such as Nobody's Perfect; toy lending library; resource lending library; support groups; information sessions; parent help line; community kitchens, gardens and sewing; literacy programs; mobile programs; school readiness programs and child-oriented programs.

To function effectively, these community-based organizations rely heavily on partnerships with other organizations, community involvement and a strong volunteer base. The Centre also provides specialized prevention and parenting programs for youth and young adult parents, as well as support and literacy training.

The East Prince Women's Information Centre opened its doors in November 1984. A group of Summerside women established the Centre with the priority of addressing the unmet needs of the women of East Prince. The Centre's purpose is to support change in the status of women and to encourage full and equal participation in the social, economical, political and legal sphere of daily life in the community. EPWIC's goals are to provide a meeting place for all women; serve as an information and referral service to community resources; support women whose lifestyles have changed due to relocation, job re-entry, change in marital status; and to offer volunteer opportunities in new work skills, fulfill personal goals and meet other women.

EPWIC is currently sponsoring activities designed to reflect the information needs of women, such as legal aid for family law, programs about entrepreneurship, prescription drug addiction, a comparative database of court cases and sentences (focusing on family violence), self-help and support groups, a film series, a resource library, public speakers, conferences, lobbying and networking.
Funding was recently cut from EPWIC's employment-oriented projects including Women in Management, Women in Trades, Women Entrepreneurs and the Entrepreneur Handbook. In the early 1990’s, EPWIC produced "A Directory of Services for Women and Their Families," submission of policy papers and a teen mothers' support group.

FAMILY RESOURCE CENTRES

In Nova Scotia, Family Resource Centres, operating with funding from the Community Action Program for Children, are grassroots organizations, geared toward families living in low-income circumstances. The programs offered by Family Resource Centres are designed for children aged 0-6 years by strengthening and supporting these children and their families. This is achieved, in part, by offering a variety of parent-driven programs and services, including a prenatal program; drop-in play programs; parenting programs such as Nobody's Perfect; toy lending library; resource lending library; support groups; information sessions; parent help line; community kitchens, gardens and sewing; literacy programs; mobile programs; school readiness programs and child-oriented programs. To function effectively, these community-based organizations rely heavily on partnerships with other organizations, community involvement and a strong volunteer base.

THE BABY BUILDING CLUB (a project of the Cape Breton Family Resource Coalition).
Baby Building Club, a project of the Cape Breton Family Resource Coalition, includes a network of family resource centres throughout Cape Breton Island. The Coalition offers a comprehensive prenatal program to improve the health of babies by increasing access to healthy food, promoting breastfeeding, and reducing the isolation of young mothers in Sydney. Weekly education and support sessions are offered for pregnant women, especially teens, off-reserve Aboriginal women, and Black women. These sessions promote breastfeeding and address issues such as family violence, smoking, drinking, and drug abuse.

Family SOS works with disadvantaged parents, who may be feeling isolated, depressed or overwhelmed in raising their children, to reduce family stress. The organization assists parents in areas such as child care skills, parenting skills, family budgeting, nutrition, health care, home safety, and advocacy. Family SOS employs parents who have used the services and have learned coping skills through personal experience and received training as Family Support Workers. In 1992, Family SOS published The Family Decision-Making Demonstration Project, A model of Intervention for Victims of Child Abuse and/or Neglect.

The North End Parent Resource Centre is located in a public housing project in a multiracial low-income Halifax neighbourhood. The organization provides a meeting place for parents (generally young mothers) and their children. It has a drop-in day care and organizes activities designed to break the isolation of parents and children. The North End Parent Resource Centre is operated by the participants, who sit on the Board of Directors. Programs are offered based on the requirements of the women who register.

One activity organized by the members of the Centre is a program in which families set up a nutritional food cooperative and organized a nutrition course. As a result of this initiative, the Centre has set up a community-operated catering service. Also of note are the activities and programs offered to adolescent mothers and their children, parent support groups and many other activities that open the Centre up to other organizations in other provinces. The Centre is committed to promoting women's rights and the rights of people belonging to racial minorities.

One of the major needs of the members concerns employment and training, particularly for young black mothers who form a majority group at the Centre. A group at the Centre developed an action-research project to evaluate the training needs in their community. This enabled them to pinpoint the obstacles encountered by young single mothers when looking for work or training and empowered them to become advocates for change in that area.

E'Pit Nuji Ilmuet (Woman Advisor) is a project of the Native Council of Nova Scotia that provides culturally and linguistically appropriate programming for young or low-income Aboriginal women who are pregnant, enabling them to make informed decisions about pregnancy, child birth, and parenting. The project aims to reduce substance abuse and improve nutritional intake during pregnancy and lactation, promote and protect breastfeeding, and reduce the rate of low birth weight babies. Prenatal education is provided through home visits, workshops, and a bus that delivers resources throughout the region. Public health nurses and nutritionists offer general information sessions to promote nutrition, medical care, and breastfeeding.

Second Story Women's Centre first opened its doors in 1983. Inspired by the Lunenburg County Women's Group, Second Story is a referral, information, resource and drop-in centre for women. Second Story's goal is to raise awareness of and support for women's issues and concerns in order to achieve equality for all women. For Second Story, equality means that all women should have an equal chance to have access to, and participate in, all aspects of our society. Services offered at Second Story include support on how to deal with a low income, peer counselling, planned parenthood, information, community education and self-help groups. Planned Parenthood appears to be closed during the summer months.

The SPC welcomes all women, not only single mothers. Current programs include: Parent-child programs such as “Mother goose” (games and rhymes); childcare available during most programming; volunteer doula training and matching program; post-natal support; parent massage (on a sliding scale); infant massage classes; breast-feeding support clinic; parenting programs for parents of older children; a prenatal program that lasts 9 weeks (2 hours every Tuesday), usually has about 8 pregnant participants (+support people), is tailored to their interests, and includes guest speakers and a hospital tour. One-to-one prenatal education is also available; interest is growing and is now at about 12 women.

Low-income women in single-parent families, backed by Nova Scotia's Pictou County Women's Centre, decided in 1987 to pool their efforts to improve their personal and collective lives. As their name suggests, this group believes that collective effort brings about personal and structural change, while at the same time helping to combat the isolation of women living in rural areas.

With its distinctive leadership formula (administrative positions rotate every six months), women support each other in their problems and use collective advocacy strategies to promote and defend their rights. They have published Women and Children: Struggle for Survival, which talks about the daily struggles and hopes of the women of Pictou County.

CAPC PROJECTS

The Community Action Program for Children (CAPC) funds 13 projects in New Brunswick. Each project operates a family resource centre managed by a community board of directors. The programs offered by the 13 centres cover the province through a network of about 70 outreach sites, many in isolated rural areas. The family resource centres offer a variety of programs and activities for families with children ages 0 to 6. The centres evaluate their work regularly to find ways to improve their programs and services.

CAPC projects in New Brunswick work with a variety of partners, including New Brunswick's Early Childhood Initiatives and Public Health, the Canada Prenatal Nutrition Program, Healthy Baby and Me (HBM)/Bébé et moi en santé (BMS), literacy organizations, and transition houses.

Established in 1982, Support to Single Parents (formerly Mothers) works to improve the quality of life of low-income single parents and their children, by helping them make positive changes in their lives. Support to Single Parents designs and implements a broad range of adult workshops, and educational training programs, which benefit its target group. Individual sessions are included to provide support, referral, guidance, assessment and skill acquisition.

Support to Single Parents also operates a drop-in centre, a child care service, a swap shop and a resource centre. Support to Single Parents further provides referral services, public awareness, alliances, advocacy, and physical and emotional support services that address the needs of single parents.

Support to Single Parents provides services such as prenatal and new born care classes, parenting classes, literacy training, raising self-esteem, aids awareness, teen independence program and a new beginnings programs.

Support to Single Parents, Crossroads for Women and the Advisory Council on the Status of Women have undertaken a three-year joint project to determine the needs of women (not exclusively single mothers) whose lives have been affected by substance abuse. In conjunction with a focus group of women, a treatment model will be developed and implemented for women with addictions.

Recently, programming has changed due to cutbacks. Fewer programs are directed at young and teen parents.

UNB RESEARCH PROJECTS
Judith Wuest, Faculty of Nursing. Recently published findings from a study about single mothers and health promotion strategies after leaving abusive partners (see bibliography). Judy is currently working on a four-year, CIHR-funded project that analyses in depth the mental and physical health in the early years after women leave abusive partners. Many of the study participants are single mothers.

For her Master’s Thesis in Sociology, Jeannie Malcolm is studying single mothers who identify themselves as having made a transition from less to more self-sufficiency and asset development. There is a lot of research about the obstacles single mothers face; this study will hopefully contribute positively to our understandings of how single mothers use strengths and strategies. Jeannie is using grounded theory to analyze interviews with twelve women. 506-447-3413, moms@unb.ca.

THE SAINT JOHN COMMUNITY LOAN FUND
The Saint John Community Loan Fund gives loans to start a business or get back to work or into housing. Targeted mostly at single mothers in transition, "Opening the Door" covers security and other deposits and some repairs. They have made nearly 70 loans (on average of $1,500) from over 400 inquiries for total disbursement of approx. $100,000. The Fund also delivers courses in basic money management and a business-plan training course in partnership with the YM-YWCA. Saint John Community Loan Fund is the only community loan fund in Atlantic Canada where the risk capital is 100% private investments from individuals and groups. - Saint John Community Loan Fund, 636-8542; loanfund@nbnet.nb.ca

HABITAT FOR HUMANITY CANADA
40 Albert Street  Tel. : (519) 885-4565
Waterloo, Ontario Fax : (519) 885-5225
N2L 3S2

Habitat for humanity/life is a grassroots community-based movement. Habitat is a people-helping-people, Christian organization with the goal of providing simple, adequate and affordable shelter for low-income people. Habitat attempts to do this by asking the future home owners to contribute time, and also by soliciting resources from other people, such as their time, funds, or in-kind gifts. With needy and affluent people working together in equal partnership, they build new housing, new relationships and a new sense of community.

Through volunteer labour, Habitat builds and rehabilitates homes with the help of home owners. Houses are sold at no profit to partner families, and no-interest mortgages are issued. Small monthly mortgage payments, including taxes and insurance, are repaid over an average of 20 years and deposited into a revolving Fund for Humanity, which supports the construction of more houses.

Habitat is a joint venture in which those benefiting from it participate directly in the work. Each home owner family must invest 500 hours of unpaid labour ("sweat equity") as a down payment. They help build their own house and those of other prospective Habitat home owners. This reduces cost, increases pride of ownership and fosters positive relationships.

Habitat for Humanity is a remarkable program for a variety of reasons. By bringing people of different backgrounds together and by organizing time and resources, they are able to build more homes and help more needy families restore their dignity and self-respect.

Habitat for Humanity is administered by local affiliates across the country. It is these groups that actually build the houses. Affiliates are started by people interested in helping others in their community.

Provides operating subsidies to numerous non-profit housing corporations and non-profit housing co-operatives throughout PEI so that these non-profit organizations might offer housing at rent levels lower than those normally available in the "private" marketplace. In many cases these non-profit organizations provide housing at a rent level that is geared or tied to the household's income.

Client groups served by these non-profit organizations include: seniors, families, persons with mental health concerns, victims of family violence and the physically challenged.

As with many other community centres, Uniacke Square encourages residents of the community to empower themselves through mutual help and sharing. Projects are formulated around a group of participants and implemented: a summer camp for neighbourhood children, self-help sessions for adolescents and substance abuse, a job hunting circle, a support group for retired people, workshops on how to present a résumé, all with no financial resources...

Breaking isolation, creating ties, working together and encouraging people to commit to social change through their solidarity: these are just some of the special facets of Uniacke Square. Here, as elsewhere, almost all of the participants are women.

Housing Alternatives Inc. favours the development of non-profit cooperative housing in Saint John, N.B. With financial assistance from the Canada Mortgage and Housing Corporation (CMHC) and New Brunswick Housing Services, low-income families can now find cooperative housing in homes that have been renovated in poor neighbourhoods in Saint John. The program is called Rehabitat. There are currently nine cooperatives consisting of between 20 and 57 housing units each. More than 800 housing units have been created this way since 1981.

Housing Alternatives Inc. has also begun promoting cooperative housing projects throughout the province by advocating for changes in discriminatory legislation concerning housing for low-income families. Thus, in addition to its role of direct intervention, Housing Alternatives has taken on an advocacy role.

693-BABY (2229) 24hr Helpline

Young, single women and their children represent the single largest group of people living in poverty in Saint John. First Steps Housing Project Inc (First Steps) was developed in Saint John because of the high teen pregnancy rate and the lack of support facilities for young women and their babies. These mothers and their children are in jeopardy of poverty, illness and abuse. First Steps provides a supportive environment where young mothers can continue their education, further their personal development and gain the skills required to thrive as individuals and as parents.

In Saint John New Brunswick, on May 22, 2002, First Steps Housing Project Inc opened its doors to homeless pregnant and parenting youth.

Saint John, New Brunswick has one of the highest rates of teen pregnancy in Canada, and the birth rate in Saint John is almost 50% higher than the provincial average. For many years, the Greater Saint John Teen Pregnancy Committee, community organizations, non-profit agencies, and concerned citizens of Saint John have tried relentlessly to address the issue of teen pregnancy, primarily through preventative measures and educational methods.

These groups have seen some positive results from their efforts, showing a 19% reduction in teen pregnancy over the past five years. However, Saint John continues to have one of the highest teen pregnancy rates in Canada; 43.7 babies per 1000 are born each year.

A group of Saint John business people who were committed to help combat the growing poverty problem in Greater Saint John established the Business Community Anti-Poverty Initiative. This group selected an independent party to identify initiatives that could best effect significant and ongoing reductions in poverty in the area. The study concluded that young, single women and their children represent the single largest group of people living in poverty in Saint John. They are likely to have become pregnant as teens, experienced broken homes or abusive situations and have ongoing coping or life skill challenges.

Single mothers are unlikely to finish high school, citing personal problems as their primary reason for dropping out, including pregnancy. These statistics are alarming, and indicate that the personal safety and security of these young mothers and their infants is in jeopardy.

The aim of First Steps is to provide a supportive transitional housing facility for homeless pregnant youth and their infants. First Steps strives to ensure that homeless pregnant young women will have a healthy pregnancy and a healthy baby; and through partnering with existing community services will assist these young women in moving from homelessness to self-sufficiency and a better quality of life.

The Cumberland Prenatal Nutrition Program is a project of Maggie's Place. Staff work with pregnant women, especially those who are young, unemployed, on municipal assistance, or working for low wages. The program provides food supplements and encourages women to participate in the Basic Shelf Food Experience, a program also offered in the high school, which increases skill and awareness about healthy eating and lifestyle choices.

Through CPNP, Maggie's Place improves the nutrition of young and low-income women living in isolated rural areas, teaches them nutrition, creates support networks, and helps these women make positive lifestyle changes. To encourage full participation, the centre covers child care and transportation costs.
