

A Setting For Industry

The choice of a business site is governed by many important factors—supplies of raw materials, proximity of markets, labour, transportation—and, not the least important, whether the particular district under consideration is one where staff will be happy to work and happy to live—a combination that helps ensure good relations between executive and labour.

Meeting as it does most of Industry's basic requirements Nova Scotia excels in this last consideration, for it has a moderate climate, with open highways in the winter and the summer heat tempered by fresh sea breezes—it provides the opportunity for sports of all kinds at everyman's back door—salt and fresh water fishing and swimming, hunting and sailing—enjoyed by rich and poor alike. A Province where shady trees, verdant lawns and colourful gardens grace homes both small and large.

As well as a rapidly expanding SELLER'S market, Nova Scotia has steel, coal, lumber, gypsum, salt, limestone, fish and agricultural products available in quantity—and it has a government that is alive and ready to aid Industry and Commerce.
