

Tropiques though is Lévi-Strauss's statement that the more he uncovered elaborate social structures, the more he became aware that he was meeting individual human beings not wholly explicable in terms of social structure. It is the task of structuralism to explain the nature of the truth of the old maxim: Plus ça change, plus c'est la même chose. To be convincing a structuralist explanation must ultimately have the simplicity and clarity of the maxim. To those obscurantists who chase Freudian counterplots because of that intellectual Catch-22: the repression of repression, one must turn the countercharge. They are repressing clarity.

Dalhousie University

Alan Kennedy

CONTRIBUTORS

Douglas Barbour, a poet and critic, teaches at the University of Alberta.

Duane Edwards, from Rutherford, New Jersey, whose short story appears in this issue has also had poetry and a scholarly article published in The Dalhousie Review.

William A. Gordon teaches English at the University of Kentucky.

Ralph C. Hainer is with the Department of English, University of Waterloo.

John P. Humphrey, formerly Professor and Dean of the Faculty of Law at McGill and director of the Division of Human Rights in the United Nations from 1946 to 1966, now is back at McGill as Professor of Political Science and Law.

Lauriat Lane, Jr. is Head of the Department of English, University of New Brunswick and Editor of English Studies In Canada.

Donald G. Priestman teaches English at Ryerson Polytechnical Institute in Toronto.

R. Ravindra has a Ph.D. in physics and an M.A. in philosophy and teaches at Dalhousie in two departments — physics and religion.

Darlene Unrue teaches English at the University of Nevada, Las Vegas.

G.F. Waller teaches English, mainly Renaissance literature, at Dalhousie.

Jonathan Webb holds an M.A. in Canadian history from the University of Toronto and is currently working in Ottawa as a free-lance writer.

Verse from: Pier Giorgio DiCicco, Toronto; John Ditsky, Windsor, Ontario; Charles Edward Eaton, Woodbury, Connecticut; Irena Friedman, Toronto; Dave Margoshes, Calgary; Marsha Mitchell, Thunder Bay, Ontario; Peter Stevens, Windsor; Eric Trethewey, New Orleans; Sybil Korff Vincent, Perrysburg, Ohio.