

CONTRIBUTORS

T.H. Adamowski teaches English at the University of Toronto (Erindale College). He has written articles on Faulkner, Sartre and Lawrence, in Canadian and U.S. periodicals.

John Baglow wrote his Ph.D. thesis on the Scottish poet Hugh MacDiarmid. Baglow's poetry has appeared in numerous little magazines and his first book of poetry, Emergency Measures, appeared in 1976.

Roo Borson is a graduate of the MFA programme at UBC. Her work has appeared widely and her first book of poems, Landfall, appeared in 1977. A second collection, In the Smokey Light of the Fields, is due in 1980.

David Citino's book Last Rites and Other Poems will be published in June 1980 by Ohio State University Press.

Richard C. Davis has been teaching English at the University of Calgary, and has been a fellow there in the Institute for the Humanities.

Barry Dempster has had stories published in Prism, The Fiddlehead, Descendant and a previous issue of The Dalhousie Review. One of his stories appeared in Best Canadian Stories 1980.

Stan Fogel teaches English at the University of St. Jerome's College, Waterloo, Ontario.

Leona Gom lived for twenty years on a farm in northern Alberta; has published two books of poetry, Kindling and The Singletree; she currently teaches at Douglas College in B.C.

John Halperin, who teaches at the University of Southern California, is presently visiting Professor of English at the University of Sheffield. He has published widely on 19th and 20th century literature.

John V. Hicks, who lives in Saskatchewan, was an accountant with the provincial government until retirement. He has published in many journals in Canada and the U.S.; a selection of his poetry appeared in 1978 under the title Now Is a Far Country and a further selection is in preparation.

Keith Henderson teaches at Vanier College in Montreal. He has been working on a novel and his poetry has appeared in Canadian Forum and The Fiddlehead.

T.D. MacLulich has taught English at several Canadian Universities; presently he is at the University of Manitoba.

A.F. Moritz's most recent book of poems, Between the Root and the Flower appeared this year from Blackfish Press, Vancouver.

S.J.R. Noel is Professor of Political Science at the University of Western Ontario. He is the author of Politics in Newfoundland.

Nils Orvik is Professor of Political Studies at Queen's University, Ontario, and Director of the Queen's Centre for International Relations. Dr. Orvik has written several books and articles on various aspects of Western defence and security, with special reference to the northern areas.

Samuel Pickering, Jr. teaches English at the University of Connecticut.

Evelyn R. Sadubin is studying law at Osgoode Hall in Toronto. Her poems have appeared in several Canadian journals.

Myra Glazer Schotz, a lecturer at Ben-Gurion University of the Negev, has written on Blake, Lawrence and Shakespeare. She is currently a Visiting Scholar at UCLA.

Robert Thacker teaches English at the University of Manitoba.