In Memoriam

ARTHUR STANLEY MACKENZIE

On the eve of publication of this number, THE DALHOUSIE REVIEW records with profound sorrow its loss through death of one who assisted at its founding and has shared ever since in promoting its development.

To the University of which he was always so proud to be himself an alumnus, Dr. A. S. Mackenzie rendered service first with rare and memorable skill as a teacher, afterwards for twenty years with wisdom, administrative efficiency and constant vision for the future as President. His memorial is not merely in the records and visible tokens of University growth, so obvious to the eye; it is no less in the affectionate and grateful remembrance of a multitude of Dalhousians everywhere.

This REVIEW, which he served in its early years as a member of its Editorial Board, later as Vice-President of the Review Publishing Company, joins in tribute to one who discerned from the first its possibilities and who cooperated tirelessly in furthering its progress for the cause of public education he had at heart.
