Worker loses it in Faculty ASS

by keen_dick@onllysomewhatstupid.bum
the mullette

Dementia froths in a white paste at the corner of Nelly Handsome's mouth. Sitting on the stoop of the Rebecca Cohen with his arms tucked under his knees, he rocks back and forth. Incomprehensible phrases garble his tongue, sometimes coming in whispers and sometimes as shouts.

"Bad man...Bad man! Gonna get out! Gonna get out!" he laments frightfully. His sister, Nutsa Handsome, swings by in her Dad's white firebird every day to feed the torn man. Standing beside her brother she recounts some of his story.

"Well let's see now. Gahd. Christ. Fucking Alky is what he was. But Gahd he had great teeth and a future too, see? A genius with his hands. A whasit. The pistachio of construction. No, no, the Piccolo, or the what's his face? Picasso of construction. Everything were goin great until. Shit, it were goin great. This new Faculty ASS building made him a new man. He'd come home everyday without his usual Cap'n Morgies. Instead he'd only have an eighty of Schooner's finest. But then, Y'know."

Nutsa looks at the building with a mixture of fear and disgust. The construction workers, once Nelly's friends shun him, not because they think he's nuts but because they're worried. They're worried about the curse that Mr. Handsome let loose on the Faculty ASS building.

"Look." Nusta Handsome wants to say something but she can't. "Look, it's too hard, see. Fuck. I don't know. I just want my broder back. Is that so much to ask?"

A tear falls to the pavement. Nelly pokes it with his finger. Nutsa spits towards the ugly yellow vinyl siding. Her outburst pushes Nelly into another chanting frenzy.

"ASS man! ASS man! ASS man!"

In his eyes the story is all too clear. A man pushed over the edge.

After being paid a hefty sum, Dr. Rod Inuturo, a well known psychologist and author of Over the River Insanity, has few answers for sweet old Nelly.

"In my book, available at Thapters across the nation and electronically over the 'information superhighway', I explore Nelly's condition. Clearly he is demented. His rejected feelings which eventually cracked his mother archetype are pushing him to fixate on his homophobia. Undoubtedly Mr. Handsome is propogating what I call, the myth of man's reality. In his case, a giant stinky ass pursues him. Why he chose this exact image to curse himself with is another question. But to him, the giant ass is a genuine threat."

The workers aren't saying much either. However one of his buddies, Morgan Ikfoods, agreed to talk over Boby's Donuts coffee. Through the café windows, he seemed ever under the watchful eyes of the building.

"He was all normal. Man, let me tell you. Comin into work late, all hungover, either beer butt or rum bum we joked. Then, 'bout two weeks ago Nel comes to work, still real fuct from 'da night b'fore. We were working the scaffolding that evening. Real cold, and it was hard getting the fingers on 'da go, y'know. Then he doubled over. Man, he looked right frightful. Lots of pain in the tubes so to speak. Bowels hot for the Standard. He was pushin it grenade like. Five seconds to go, might say. Anyways, says to me between grunts, 'I'm not gonna make it Morgie! I says what do you mean? Then he points to 'da quick shitters four floors down. So I laughs but he stumbles to the ladder and goes to the roof. I didn't near see him for least an hour."

Morgan looks up at the roof and overpriced sandstone. His hands are cut up from replacing all the ethernet cables again, again, and again. Finally, shaking his head as he waddles back to work, he says:

"Look here. I don't know what happened. But nobody will go on the roof now. Gahd. Smells like Satan's ass. Decaying butt ringing at the doorbell, y'know? It's ungodly up there now."

Few would argue about the unsaintly smell shrouded over the roof, slowly making its way to the ground floor. The workers no longer tote their lunch pails proudly to work. Instead they cast their eyes shamefully to the melting snow and mud forming on the ground.

They all wear gas masks now, and no longer speak about their demented ex-colleague's name. They fear his curse.

In the end, Mr. Ikfood was right. No one will ever know what devilry was spawned on the Faculty ASS building roof. But fearfully glancing at Mr. Handsome, most agree that it must have come from poor Nelly's ass.

Nelly Handsome, one hour before being found demented in Faculty ASS.

Dal President honours workers lost in Faculty ASS

by sil lee hillman
the mullette

At an emotional ceremony Tom Traves acknowledged the hard work and dedication of the 27 workers who gave their lives in order to complete the FASS building a scant 12 months late.

"In any major construction, project lives are lost, and this one was no different," said Traves. "Certainly in the years to come this cool metal siding will serve as a memorial to the workers who gave their lives. Truly it will stand as a monument to them for the next 10 to 15 years until this piece of crap is condemned."

DSU president Steven Coté, who attended the ceremony, added that baskets filled with corn related products would be sent out to the families of the deceased.

"During any high risk construction project, be it an underwater tunnel, deep sea oil rig or academic building, lives are lost," Coté said. "Today we take a moment and acknowledge that loss and reflect on how much more this monstrosity could have cost had we adhered to even the most basic safety standards."

Traves singled out two workers in particular whom he and DSU president Steven Coté personally sealed in concrete, rather than pay another nickel of student dollars for adequate safety measures.

"These two fellas were there day-in and day-out, right up to the end when we buried them alive and silenced their screams with tons of concrete. Today we salute their hard work and senseless killing," said a clearly disinterested Traves.

In the end a plaque listing the names of the dead, who someone bothered to jot down, was officially dedicated and hanged at eye level over the first floor men's urinal. Later that same day, it was destroyed by a group of hippies who said it offended them. There are no plans for it to be replaced at this time.

The Mullette was founded last week when a Dal student mistook a pile of wet paper towels for a newspaper. Unable to determine what the towels had been used for, he was inspired to seek spiritual clarity by jotting insightful remarks on the fragile sheets. Subsequently encountering a group of persons with regrettable hairstyles, he was beaten unconscious. These persons quickly realized the significance of the now crumbling documents and founded a world-controlling secret society before going out drinking. Attempts to impose the new world order on bystanders were met with open rebellion, resulting in significant property and personal damage. The remaining fragments of the paper towels were seized by a servant of Satan, posing as the Grad House manager. Unable to locate the towels or their author the next morning, the world-controlling secret society set about recreating the documents on fresh paper towel. The meticulously reconstructed sheets of deep spiritual enlightenment were left at the door of The Gazette by an unidentified frat brother in a rubber bandage mask. An attached note demanded that the papers be published for the betterment of humankind. An unidentified member of The Gazette staff, seeing how the revelations could aid him in his plan for ultimate transcendence, snatched the towels, several issues of Maxim, and remains locked in the third floor SUB men's washroom. As the transcendence-seeking Gazette staff member entered the men's room, a confused gentleman with a truly sad mullet wandered out, dropping a large pile of wet paper towels in the hall. Other Gazette staff, now attempting to break open the washroom door, were distracted and decided to name the spoof issue the Mullette. Coincidence? Yeah, probably.

Area man fellated

Local man Willard Stevens was reported by his roommates to have received fellatio this morning. While there has been no outside confirmation of the act, Steven's friends feel there is no reason to doubt him. "Willard's really been pushing for this for some time," reported one of Steven's roommates on the condition of anonymity. "Willard has been working on his relationship with Linda for some time. They're clearly progressing, as we saw last week," said the roommate, referring to the report on March 29 that Linda had consented to trying new things.

With this announcement Steven hopes that full intercourse is right around the corner.

Aaron Barkhouse — JDS Uniphase Scholar for 2000/2001

JDS Uniphase Corporation is pleased to congratulate Aaron Barkhouse on being awarded a JDS Uniphase Canadian Scholarship in Optics and Photonics.

This scholarship is awarded annually to undergraduate and graduate students enrolled in an Engineering Physics or Physics program with a focus on Optics or Photonics. The $5,000 scholarship is renewable up to a maximum of three consecutive years and is awarded on the basis of academic achievement and the potential for a successful industrial career in the field of Optics or Photonics. In addition to the award itself, each recipient has the potential of summer or Co-op employment terms at JDS Uniphase. The JDS Uniphase Canadian Scholarship Program will be expanded over the next two years to provide 90 Scholarships to students across Canada.

JDS Uniphase is a world leader in the design, development, and manufacture of advanced fiberoptic products for the telecommunications, data communications, and cable television industries. We are proud to support the students of today who will develop the advanced optical networks of tomorrow.

Our industry is young and energetic, and JDS Uniphase welcomes the new ideas and directions that today's bright students bring to it. Aaron should be commended on his achievement.

"Reality" game show a killer

Appealing to the Survivor, and Big Brother fans around the world, ABC is announcing a new game show that is expected to captivate audiences around the globe, AKA North America.

Ten high school kids will be pitted against one socially awkward adolescent, and week by week they will be rewarded for their mean and insensitive remarks to the social reject. Each week, the troubled youngster will be armed with firearms and given complete immunity. He will be sent into his school in search of one of his ten potential victims. "This is really groundbreaking," said Nutty McShithead, president of ABC. "It's what is popular - we can't be blamed for giving people what they want."

McShithead also pointed out in later ramblings that his network had the power to make people do anything he wants, and that not even God could stop him.

Traves rails blow, turns into Griffin

Using his own personal payroll to fund the project, Dalhousie president Tom Traves plans to invest millions into the Columbian cocaine trade, and ship tons of cocaine into Halifax on a weekly basis.

Traves, who is currently undergoing a metamorphosis into the Real Lord Dalhousie, says that this will help him become much richer.

"I hope that with this deal, I can finally attain the power I have always wanted, and crush this school with the flick of my wrist."

When Traves was asked why there was a need for such power, he transformed into a Griffin and leveled Howe Hall.

NSPIRG members come to rally, in single taxi.

Local politicians were dealt a devastating blow this week when the Nova Scotia Public Interest Research Group mobilized its entire network to fight City Hall in an effort to bring about an end to the slaughter of countless Long Horned beetles by City and Government workers.

When the activists arrived by taxi at city hall, members of council were visibly shaken.

"What! All four of them are coming. My God!" said Mayor Kelly, who reportedly screamed like a little girl.

An NSPIRG representative later confirmed rumours that both a protest and a vegan potluck were planned later in the week to prevent globalization.

Scientist find link between dreadlocks and parental income

After minutes of strenuous research Dalhousie researcher and undergrad Phillip Kracken confirmed Monday that he has established a clear link between the presence of Dreadlocks and a strong parental income.

"It is my belief that this research, conducted twenty minutes ago, is conclusive," said Kracken. He spent almost half an hour smoking in front of the Killam and sighted several contributing factors to the link.

These included not needing to work to pay for school and having plenty of free time to work on hairstyles between ski trips to Whistler and Phish concerts.

Later this week Kracken hopes to further his research by examining the phenomenon of having a neat appearance in order to work at a shitty job to pay for school while enduring the chatter of those f---ing rich kid assholes in my class.

Dal mops up after Jesus

by trey grande

the mullette

A recent shocking discovery made by a Dalhousie employee, who wishes to go unnamed, has attracted the attention of religious groups across the country.

Jeff Currie, a custodian at the Killam Library, was putting the finishing touches on the atrium floor last Saturday morning when a peculiar stain caught his eye. The unusual discoloration, presumably of coffee and pooling condensation, bore an uncanny resemblance to a bearded human face. Being a devout Catholic, Currie almost immediately made the connection between the image and the likeness of Jesus Christ.

"At first, I thought it kinda looked like Santa, right..." explained the 57-year old sanitation engineer in a recent interview. "Then I remembered his white beard didn't match the dark stain. That's when I knew it had to be Jesus."

This isn't the first time a paranormal apparition has appeared on campus. Library archives reveal that this is the third religious icon sighting in the last twenty-three years. A 1978 issue of the Dalhousie Gazette details the discovery of an image of Saint Francis of Assisi that appeared in the mildew of a Student Union Building women's washroom. A rust mark on a fuse box panel in the A&A Building resembled the form of the Virgin Mary for a short time in late 1983. Both incidences resulted in destruction of the images by Dalhousie officials in order to quell intense investigations by religious groups.

Location of alleged Jesus stain.

Coffee stain closely resembling the face of Jesus.

Jack DeMolay, leader of the Students United in Christian Knowledge chapter at Dalhousie, is determined to prevent such intervention by the school administration in this case. Members of his non-denominational campus group have taken action to prevent such an intrusion.

"This is clearly an ongoing conspiracy," states DeMolay. "We will not have the wool pulled over our eyes for a third time in two decades. Clearly, the Lord is trying to send us a message and this area cannot be tampered with until it has been fully deciphered."

The young third year Commerce student has arranged for temporary protection of the apparition. Members of the Dalhousie chapter will form a human shield around the blemish until a proper barrier can be constructed.

How long will this vigil last? "As long as it takes. We were foolish in allowing the Timmy's people to destroy our plans in 1998. This time we are even more determined."

DeMolay was referring to the throngs of supporters who were dispersed by Tim Horton's owner Mark Findlay three years ago when a similar apparition of Christ appeared on the window of a Cape Breton coffee shop in the form of cleaner residue. That event was deemed to be very newsworthy by national television stations and had a serious impact on the religious faith of many Canadians.

This all comes to light in the wake of the controversial denouncement of Jesus Awareness Week by Gazette editorial staff member Patrick Blackie. Several local Christian groups believe that the image is actually a direct response to these negative comments about religion on campus. Mr. Blackie refused to comment on the actual stain but did refer to DeMolay as a "peon" and his followers as "assbags" several times during our interview.

Secrets of frat exposed

by dill p. ickle
the mullette

In an effort to debunk negative myths about fraternities and frat brothers, one of their own has approached The Gazette with details of frat life never before revealed to the public.

Frat brother Krishna Parmar agreed, on condition of anonymity, to expose the secrets of frat life.

"Frat is not a four letter word," said Parmar, on condition of anonymity. "We're sensitive, modern guys."

Parmar, on condition of anonymity, listed positive aspects of the frat sub-culture, claiming "we write poems and shit. I wrote a poem."

"We believe that women are much better than men," said Parmar, on condition of anonymity, reflecting on commonly held misconceptions about frat attitudes toward women. "For certain things.

'Specially once you get them drunk. I wrote a poem.'

Parmar, on condition of anonymity, became evasive when asked about initiation rituals and hazing.

"Yeah. I'm straight, ok. My brothers are cool," he said. "And I wrote a poem."

A public information forum is planned for incoming frosh next Sept. Parmar plans to disguise his identity by wearing a rubber bondage mask.

"The mask symbolizes how frats are dominated over by popular myths," he said, on condition of anonymity. "I'll have other clothes on and read a poem."

Hollywood stars invade Dalhousie athletics

by bill & ted

the mullette

In the past few months, Hollywood stars have bombarded Halifax. Kevin Spacey, Julianne Moore, Cate Blanchett, Judi Dench, and Sean Penn are a few of the many names that have been filming movies in the area. Thus, Pete & Clay have been scouring the countryside in hope of running into to these illustrious debutants.

Imagine our surprise when we found out that some of Hollywood's finest were actually attending Dalhousie University and participating on our varsity sports teams. Is this too far-fetched to believe? See for yourself:

1. Ever wonder what happened to that cute seven-year-old Chicago girl, Soleil Moon Frye, who stole our hearts in the 80's classic "Punky Brewster"? Well, wonder no longer. It appears that after leaving the spotlight in Hollywood, she assumed the alias, Carly Procter. Currently in her first year of science at Dalhousie she spends her spare time playing 'footie' for women's soccer team. Wow, she was so famous that she even had her own Saturday morning cartoon!

2. Nicholas Donald, aka Alan Cummings, is also in his first year at Dalhousie and is a guard for the basketball team. He has starred in such greats movies as Eyes Wide Shut, Get Carter and GoldenEye. You can catch Cummings in two new movies this summer Josie and the Pussycats and Spy Kids or playing one mean game of shoe golf. Cummings is known to frequent the Oasis, where on Karaoke night belts out Spice Girls tunes and remembers his favorite role in Spice World.

3. Dal even has its own Baldwin. Daniel is the lesser known of the Baldwin brothers, which probably made it easier for him to go undetected for so long. Daniel has starred in a lot of movies, most we'd rather not mention to protect his pride. However, he did star in John Carpenter's Vampires and Mulholland Falls. Assuming the name Jason Troini, he currently plays forward for the men's hockey team.

4. It has been a busy few years for Dal's Al Yarr, who has served as a coach for Cross Country, Track and Field and Basketball. His Dalhousie teams have won more than forty AUAA Championships. Al has been honoured with numerous AUAA Coach of the Year awards in recognition of his coaching excellence. He is also an assistant professor in the School of Recreation, Physical and Health Education and has a joint appointment in Athletics.

Few know that in his spare time Al also stars in his own television show. The Red Green Show, which features endless duct tape jokes is currently broadcast coast to coast in Canada and throughout several countries in the world including Australia, Korea, Fiji, Trinidad, Turkey, and the United States. The "The Red Green Fan Club" otherwise known as "The Al Yarr Fan Club" now boasts over 5,000 members. Those interested in joining can apply at the front desk at Dalplex.

Cat call

Dear Editor,

This girl I know has this cat, called Rocko, and she loves this cat, so I think, I'll check out what the cat does, you know, try and sort of translate that into human action, cause I want to get with this girl, so I figure, if I can do like the cat, only not be a cat, she'll go for that.

So, I watch the cat and it keeps pretty busy, shredding the furniture, ripping wings off flies, puking on the carpet, killing small animals and birds, digging around in its litter box, it's total hairshirt falls out constantly, ripping open the garbage and throwing it around, picking at fleas and scratching and biting this girl I like. Plus, it sometimes sits on her face at night.

So, she just loves this cat, Rocko, gives him total body rubs for an hour, and talks to him like chicks usually talk after five hard lemonades and a fattie, only she does it without the booze or the fattie. Not only is this very hot but also much cheaper.

The reason I'm writing is, it didn't work out right, so I'm trying to get a handle on what went wrong. She got weird about it pretty much right away, and really freaked out about the flea thing. I'm thinking maybe I should have used the litter box instead of sticking my hands in the toilet. I decided to hold off on offering to get on her face.

Anyway, I'm wondering if any guys out there have had any luck getting with girls by behaving like their cats do. My frat brother Krishna said chicks have some psycho double-standards. Any suggestions would be cool.

Volunteer With L'Arche "The Place of Small Miracles"

L'Arche Cape Breton is a community for people who are mentally challenged and those who choose to live and work with them. We are committed to equality, solidarity, and simplicity, and since we began in 1983, hundreds of men and women have come to share this way of life with us.

Most of our volunteers are university students or graduates who have found something lacking in academia. They come to L'Arche from all over the world to discover the importance of relationships, to be pushed to develop their potential, and to discover the beauty of men and women who are mentally challenged.

We are always accepting applications from energetic, open-minded, and committed people. We provide room and board plus a monthly stipend, and will cover your student loan payments as well. There are even programs available for people interested in volunteering overseas, as there are over 100 L'Arche communities throughout the world.

"Oh my god these shoes make my look!"

Oh my god seriously these new shoes make my look, I love them, they are shiny new and have my favorite brand name on them. No doubt these will be hard to beat at school on Monday! If I didn't have them I think I would die. I am going to where these 24 hours a day, I would kill to get a chance to meet Michael Jordan and thank him for these beautiful shoes.

"Oh My god Look, they make me make these shoes!"

Oh my god I am only eight and have to work in manufacturing. This is awful. I have never been to a school. If I don't keep up production I think I will be beaten. Thank god there are only 24 hours in a day and I only work 19 of them. Maybe one day if I survive I will be able to meet Micheal Jordan and kill him with his beautiful shoes.
