Her eyes shining with pride, a grandmother puts the finishing touches on a Christmas-gift sweater and rushes it off to Cousins for expert blocking.

At a lonely mail box a carrier tosses out a package to a waiting girl. It's a party dress just back from Cousins—fresh, spotlessly clean, skillfully finished and carefully packed.

By city truck delivery, by agents in many communities and by mail and express Cousins serves the province—well.

Through the Night . . . 'Til Day Dawns

SOMEWHERE giant trucks race through the night with their cargoes for defence and war. Somewhere too, a mammoth locomotive exhales volley after volley of gray-black smoke as it speeds its mile-long load of weapons and material to the port of embarkation, while far-off in a place of desolation and barren hills, bull dozers and steam shovels level off and scoop out an airfield that will cover a thousand acres.

Hundreds of telephone messages are necessary before a train moves, a plane flies or a corvette is launched. Never before have telephone systems been called upon to carry such a load. But this is Nova Scotia, the veritable "pier" of Canada, throbbing with the intensity of a national emergency. And in this national emergency our share and our part in our country's defence for 1942 is to provide and supply a telephone communication system second to none—to serve national needs first.

The Halifax Chronicle has been closely linked with the history of Nova Scotia for 113 years. It is one of the most quoted newspapers in Canada, and is the only paper of the Maritimes of which that impartial authority, the Encyclopedia Britannica, says it is "of national reputation and wide political influence."

Adhering always to a sound, sane editorial policy it has won and enjoys the confidence of all sections of the people to a marked degree.

The Halifax Daily Star, established in 1873, is associated with the Chronicle as an afternoon paper. These two, in combination, provide an excellent coverage of the entire province.
