

- L. J. BRIGHT is an Emeritus Professor of English Literature who lives in Montreal. His fiction has appeared in both Canadian and U.S. quarterlies and journals.
- CHARLES EDWARD EATON's poetry and prose have appeared in Harper's Magazine, Kenyon Review, The Yale Review, The Nation, Virginia Quarterly Review, Sewanee Review, The Southern Review, and many other magazines. He has published a book of art criticism and four collections of short stories, most recently New and Selected Stories, 1959-1989. His eleventh collection of poetry, A Guest on Mild Evenings, will be published by Cornwall Books in the spring of 1991.
- GAIL GHAI is a Canadian-born writer, a graduate of the University of Alberta and now resettled in the Pittsburgh area where she teaches English as a Second Language and conducts a poetry workshop. Her work has been published widely in the U.S., Canada, and Britain including Negative Capabilities, The Malahat Review, and The Delhi-London Quarterly. She is author of two chapbooks of poetry. A new book, Exiles, is due out in the spring of 1991 from Dawn Valley Press.
- RALPH GUSTAFSON is a widely published Canadian poet. The poems appearing in this issue are from a new collection of his poetry, Shadows in the Grass, to be published by McLelland & Stewart in the spring of 1991.
- LEWIS HORNE teaches in the Department of English at the University of Saskatchewan in Saskatoon. He has published on Dickens in The Dalhousie Review, The Dickensian, and Papers in Language and Literature.
- JULIA KEELER has been a Canadian resident since 1961. She works in Toronto as a freelance editor and lives near Grand Valley, Ontario. Her poems have been published in Poetry Toronto, Arc, Grain, The New Quarterly, The Greenfield Review, Waves, and Matrix.
- INGEBORG M. KOHN is Associate Professor of French and Director of the Humanities Program at the University of Arizona. She teaches literature, literary criticism and theory of the twentieth century, and has published articles on Proust, the French Nouveau Roman, and Nouvelle Critique.
- JOHN LINGARD teaches English and Drama at the University of Western Ontario. His translations of Ibsen's plays have been performed at the Stratford Festival, the Shaw Festival, the Vancouver Playhouse and the Milwaukee Chamber Theatre. His article, "To Elgeseter and Beyond: Ibsen, History, and the Inner Stage," appeared in the Dalhousie Review, Vol. 67, no. 2.

HUGH MacCLENNAN, a Dalhousie graduate, was a noted Canadian novelist and professor.

TRICIA M. OKAMURA is a student of classics at Stanford University. She also studies Japanese language and literature, and has been writing poetry for seven years.

SIMONE POIRIER-BURES now teaches in the English Department at Virginia Polytechnic Institute and State University in Blacksburg, Virginia. She has published poetry, fiction and reviews in several American journals. Her story in this issue is part of a larger work called Candyman which she is now completing.

DAVID P. REITER is Managing Editor of Redoubt magazine and winner of the 1989 Queensland Premier's Poetry Award. His fiction and poetry has appeared in magazines throughout Australia, North America, and Europe. He has published two books of poetry, The Snow in Us (Five Islands Press, 1989) and Changing House, and has recently completed a novel, Frugal Rock.

D. C. SAVAGE is the Executive Director of the Canadian Association of University Teachers and Professor of History at Carleton University.

PETER B. WAITE is Emeritus Professor of History at Dalhousie University.- His most recent book is Lord of Point Grey: Larry MacKenzie of UBC (Vancouver: UBC Press, 1987) and he is now writing the history of Dalhousie.

BRIAN WALKER is Coordinator of General Chemistry Laboratories at Texas Technical University. His poems have appeared in various periodicals in Canada, England, Scotland, Wales, Ireland, Denmark, Luxembourg, Italy, Switzerland, Australia, New Zealand, India, Japan, and the U.S., including The Fiddlehead, Humanist in Canada, Poetry Ireland, Poetry Wales, and Transnational Perspectives.

SUSAN M. WHITMORE is an Assistant Professor in English at the University of Nebraska in Lincoln. Her poems have most recently appeared in Calliope and Kentucky Poetry Review, and her book of poems, The Invisible Woman, is forthcoming from Singular Speech Press in January 1991.