

Black Flowers Burst Out Wherever The Night Has Knelt for Philip Larkin

Some moonbeam pierced through all the jazz,
Bad sex and drunken spree;
Master of the ordinary,
He requested of evening which light was his.
Pointing to the sky, where poetry smears
Black holes of flowers between the stars,
Night touched the blackest rose.

Edward Locke