In Memoriam

SINCE the appearance of the January number, the Editorial Board has sustained a very heavy loss. The late Dr. W. E. Maclellan was one of a small group to whose co-operative efforts the founding of this magazine was due. In the section he conducted from its first issue in April, 1921, his special talent and his tireless work were always at its service. To his high literary gift, his critical independence, his reflective originality, and his disinterested enthusiasm for the spread of knowledge, THE DALHOUSIE REVIEW owes much. His colleagues on its Editorial Board join with many others in grateful tribute to his memory.
