BROWN OF THE GLOBE, Vol 11: Statesman of Confederation, 1860-1880

by J. M. S. Careless

In the second of two volumes on the life of George Brown, Toronto press magnate and Liberal party leader, J. M. S. Careless deals with the Confederation period—the sectional conflict that brought deadlock to Upper and Lower Canada by 1864, George Brown's vital function in opening a way out, his key role in the construction of Confederation during the next three years, and his later activities. With sixteen pages of illustrations.

CONFERENCE ACROSS A CONTINENT

An interesting narrative account of the Duke of Edinburgh's Second Commonwealth Study Conference on the human consequences of industrial change. Attended by key representatives of labour and management from the Commonwealth countries, the conference opened in Montreal in May, 1962, and closed in Vancouver three and a half weeks later. Practically every type of Canadian community was studied by the three hundred representatives as they travelled across the country. Over a hundred black and white illustrations. Endpaper maps.

CANADA: A Story of Challenge

by J. M. S. Careless

Revised and enlarged edition 1963. Professor Careless's first-rate one-volume history of Canada won a Governor General's Award in its original 1953 edition. "The student and general reader alike will be grateful for an introduction to Canadian history which, while giving satisfactory answers to obvious questions, offers a pleasant invitation to further study and research." Canadian Historical Review. "The most satisfactory brief history for the lay reader in Canada." Toronto Globe and Mail.
