If We Didn’t Forget

If

we didn’t forget everything, famous everything
    would have impaled itself like the North Pole’s pointed end blowing out like a galaxy’s deflating

oh, memory, you holy paradise and its fools.
    Memory’s needles are streaming through us our days young as yesterday would burn
    till the skin was gone, but we would forget.