Editorial

AS this, the last issue of the school year goes to press, the present Staff makes its farewell bow, and wish to extend our best wishes to the incoming Staff.

The Journal has passed the stage where it had to be dependent upon all material handed in, depending upon a few individuals to rewrite, edit, and organize the material into magazine form. It has now reached that stage where a high standard of excellence must be attained, if it is to be received by its readers in a favorable manner.

However, this not only depends upon the Staff but also upon your cooperation. If the Journal is to continue as a dignified publication disseminating news of the school and features of interest to medical students we need your articles, your opinions, your criticisms, and your likes and dislikes. Get in touch with your respective class representatives, or any member of the staff and express your feelings concerning the improvement of this publication.

This year a candid snapshot section has been instituted. We mean to give you not only faculty shots, but also candid snapshots of your fellow students.

It is hoped that we can put into practice other new plans and improvements so that the Journal may continue as a permanent part of school life.
