

TERRY TROWBRIDGE
HAMILTON HARBOUR

A harbor gull's yellow feet cross the concrete shoreline of steel mills up to a Stonehenge made from idle forklifts.

He steps into timorous puddles that stay with him when he takes wing carrying a thousand industrial ways to break the spine of the sky, bird by bird, hollow bones falling like syringes on the beach.